Key Points to Remember

- The process is designed to give students choice in their educational experience.
- Only rank students you are interested in.
- 3 rounds and each last 2 business days with 3 business days between.
- You may receive new applications between rounds. Give those applicants an opportunity. Designation limits may not have allowed them to request your program in an earlier round.
- Declines are a normal part of the process.
- You may not fill all of your months.

What to Expect

- Each student has 17 rotations available though, on average, a student only fills 6 rotations.
- Additionally, student designation limits cap the number of programs a student can designate for each month.
 - Fewer student designations per month. The average is 4 application designations per month filled.
 - Fewer of your offers are declined. The acceptance rate for offered rotations increased from 44% to 57%.
- You should expect:
 - Approximately 1 decline for every 1 acceptance.
 - To have unfilled months every cycle.
- Declines are part of the process.
